ABUSIVE LANGUAGE TO HIS OFFICERS.

A "Times" Representative Visited the Vessels. He Says Richmond People Are Insulting and Have Hooted His Men.

Insamuch as the newspaper discussion regarding the proposition to remove the monitor dect from its present anchorage to City Foint has contained only one side of the question, a statement from Commander Graham, of the fleet, will be interesting as well as in-

In answer to questions Captain Graham made the following statements. He spoke rapidly and unhesitatingly, showing civarly that his utterances were actuated purely through just and honest motives.

"In the first place," said the Commander, 'I have nothing whatever to do with the origin of the effort on foot to remove the monitors from this place. My first intimation of it was a letter which I received a few days of it was a letter which I received a new days since from a Mr. Burke, informing me that such was the move on the part of the Petersburg people, and asking my aid in the matter, to which I replied that I thought it incompatible with the discipline of the service to interfere in the matter, but if the Department wished my opinion on the subject, of course I would comply with their instructions.

"In my opinion," continued the Communder, "this is a very bad berth for the monitors, not only on account of the milling monitors, not only on account of the filling up by the freshets, but also on account of the filling up by the freshets, but also on account of the narrow width of the river at this point, which causes the wash from the paddles of the sleamers coming up and down the river to free the ships to surge on their movings to such an extent that it carries away the totle, to keep the moorings in their place they have given me the pleasure of their presence aboard the monitors. As I have never met the other members of the committee I cannot understand why they should entertain any ill feeling for me.

I think that the foundation for whatever feeling there may be adverse to me amongst a certain portion of the citizens of Richmond is simply owing to the fact that I have never considered it commensurate with product to considered it commensurate with my duty to museum or a sort of a Coney Island pleasure

"I have been thirty-four years in the naval "I have been thirty-four years in the naval service of the United States, and during that time I have served on board a great many vessels, and I have never yet seen a United States man-of-war thrown open to the promisenous daily visiting of the general public. I was brought up in my early days in the navy under the twition and guidance of some of the brightest officers of the old may befor de war —as for instance much more as 'befo' de war'—as, for instance, such men as the late Lieutenant Robert D. Minor, of this city, and under whom I served on his first cruse—and my ideas of discipline were gathered from their teaching and examples. 'Although these ideas may not concur with those of some of my predecessors in command of the monitors as regards discipline, still it is a well-known saying that 'You can't teach an old dog new tricks.'

"As regards the published account stating that I called upon the Mayor asking him to detail a policeman to guard the landing of the steam launch at Rocketts, I will say that I have never been near the Mayor on the subject. I did go to Chief of Police Poe, who yory courteonsly told me he would do anything to aid me in his power.

"My reason for doing this was that Mr. L. D.
Crenshaw informed me that the landing had been built for the exclusive use of the boats from the monitors, and but for this impres sion I should never have approached the Chief of Police upon the subject. Finding that this landing was at nearly all times filled with loafers and dirty negroes to such an extent as to make it impossible for myself or any of my friends to get down to the boat, and, supposing from the ing, from the information received, that I ought to keep it clear, I very naturally ap-

"Since I received the letter of the decision of the Chamber of Commerce in regard to the matter of the landing and stating that I was mistaken in my impression, I have made no attempt to keep the wharf clear, and I have myself remained on board the monitors for two mouths and have not put foot outside of the ship, preferring to remain here rather than be compelled to force my way through the flithy, dirty crowd that congregates on the landing.

When the monitors are removed to Richwhen the monitors are removed to had-mond, where in my opinion they should be, there will be no cause of complaint either from the side of the Richmond public or from being in the jurisdiction of the po-lice authorities of the city on the part of my-self, for I wish to add that I think I have just as much cause to complain of the treatment that I have received from a certain class of the people of Richmond as there seems to be complaint on the other side.

"When I came here I found that these open purchases were made by the purchasing paymaster at Norfolk and at my urgent solicitations the Paymaster-General of the Navy gave an order requiring these purchases to be made here by Paymaster Lovell of the moni-tors from the merchants of Richmond. "So you see instead of my working against the people of Richmond, I have endeavored to do them a benefit."

Interesting Services in the First Baptist Church Last Evening.

The farewell meeting of the First Baptist congregation and the missionaries under appointment of the Foreign Missions Board of the Southern Baptist Convention was held last evening.

The meeting was opened by the singing of hymns numbers 1 and 100, and the reading by the Rev. Dr. Landrum of selected portions of the 18th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. After this the Rev. Dr. Cooper, in an interesting resume of the inauguration of the mis-sion movement just one hundred years ago by William Cary, an English weaver's son, who was apprenticed to a cobbler, and who, in the intervals of his trade, made a study the field for disseminating the tenets of Christian religion, and responded finally to what proved an inspired call to mission work. what proved an inspired call to mission work, recalled the great labors of such men as Judson and McCall, told how the field had been gradually enlarged until now only one nation in the world refused admission to missionaries, and the call for recruits had grown each day till the number could not be increased with sufficient rapidity to supply the demand.

George Bell was charged with keeping his saloon open and selling liquor on Sunday, the 12th. George pleaded "not guilty," and it looked for awhile as if the evidence would sustain it. One after another, witnesses whose personal appearances would leave but little reason to believe that they ever missed a day, swore that although they were in the saloon they got nothing to drink. Finally, however, the tide changed, and a number testified as to the palatable juleps and other fascinating concoctions which Bell's own hand prepared for them. The evidence was conclusive, and it cost George $25 for his absent-mindedness.
